World War II Evacuation

Children, pregnant mothers, sick people and elderly people were offered the chance to be evacuated beginning in September 1939. It was entirely voluntary and out of the 3.5 million people the government expected to leave the big cities, only 1.5 million did.

The bombing did not start in 1939 as the government had predicted. People began to think that evacuation was a fuss about nothing and some began to bring their children back home. By March 1940, 1.2 million children had returned home.

Bombing began in July, 1940. This time 620,000 children left the cities.

The government made posters to try to convince mothers not to bring their children back home. Hitler is whispering 'Take them back!' into the Mother's ear!
